Throughout the week, young people participated in several workshops during which they were invited to discuss together in relation to the themes chosen for the European Youth Week (EYW). These focused around young peoples' participation in civic life and also highlighting young peoples' employability, generating ideas for initiatives that could be taken up by the local Government and the EU Parliament to increase the quality of life of young people around the EU.

During this process, around 200 young people from different age groups and backgrounds contributed several ideas that are extremely relevant for them, and would allow Maltese and European young people better opportunities for growth and development. These proposals, as well as those brought forward today, are a clear indication that young people are willing to contribute to society as a whole, and are an invaluable resource that needs to be nurtured to ensure the sustainability of development in all aspects of society.

We appreciate your participation.
